LAND THEFT

For poor families, a small patch of land is often the only source of critical food and shelter. But scores of vulnerable widows have this lifeline stolen from them after their husbands die.

Powerful relatives or neighbors steal their land with violence, or prey on orphans in their time of need. Victims are left hungry, homeless and deeply afraid.

Too often, local justice officials treat this crime as a “family matter” and tell a widow to settle with her abusers. Without accountability, criminals continue to thrive and their victims are trapped in the cycle of poverty.

QUICK FACTS

More than 115 million widows live in extreme poverty around the world.¹

By 2020, 1.5 billion of the world's urban poor will live in informal settlements and slums without any secure right to their property.²

An estimated 90% of rural sub-Saharan Africans have no proof of ownership for land where they live and work.

KAMPALA, UGANDA IJM PREVALENCE STUDY, 2014

Left theft is a common and violent experience for widows, and occurs with near-total impunity for perpetrators. Nearly one out of every three widows (30.3%) in IJM's project area reported experiencing this crime in her lifetime.

“I used to cry all the time. Now I laugh! I hope to have so many things ahead of me.”

—Grace, defensed from violent neighbors attempting to steal her home in Uganda

Meet Grace

AS SOON AS GRACE’S HUSBAND DIED, the threats began. More powerful members of her village announced that they were throwing Grace and her five children out of their home. They would take it as their own—even threatening to kill her if that’s what it took. “I would worry about my life, wondering if I died today where my children would begin from,” she laments. “This worried me so much.”

Losing her home and small plot of farmland would mean losing her only way to provide for her children. Grace tried to stand up for herself, but found no support in her community. She tried to get help from the government—visiting offices 25 miles away over and over—but no one would listen to a poor widow like her.

The day she met IJM’s lawyers, everything changed for Grace. We advocated for her rights and her safety for more than two years, and we celebrated when Grace finally got the title to her land. Today, she and her kids are safe and secure. She says happily, “My old life has ended and a new one is beginning.” Watch her story at IJM.org/graces-story

JUSTICE SYSTEM TRANSFORMATION

Uganda

As we protect individual widows like Grace, we’re also training police, prosecutors and judges to treat land theft as a serious crime—ensuring vulnerable women won’t have to live in fear.

“Since I was trained, now we can talk to the public and tell them what has to be done when land theft happens. People now know that they can come to the police with these cases. IJM has opened our minds.”
